Organize a StreamTeam!

Do you want to help protect your local stream or lake? If so, the StreamTeam program is for you.

Engage your group, large or small, in an ongoing community water stewardship project. Care for a segment of your local creek. By committing to just a few actions each year, you will make a visible and lasting impact on your local environment.

StreamTeam is a cooperative project sponsored by the KICP, Boulder Creek Watershed Initiative, city of Boulder and US Geological Survey.

IT'S IMPORTANT!

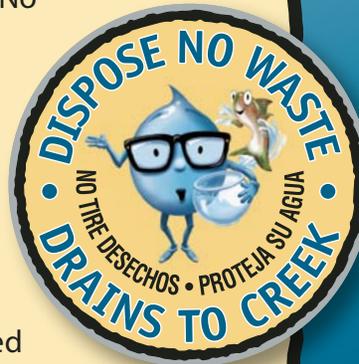

IT'S REWARDING!

Mark Drains!

Are you ready for a fun, one-time activity that helps keep creeks clean? If so, storm drain marking is the activity for you!

Storm drains lead directly to local creeks. Storm drain marking is a fun way to help reduce polluted runoff in your community. By marking the message, "Dispose No Waste, Drains to Creek," you create public awareness and enhance water quality in your local creek. Best of all, it's easy to do! Get everything you need to make it happen from the Keep It Clean Partnership.

Become a Water Steward!

The Keep it Clean Watershed Stewardship Program engages residents in developing simple, water-friendly lifestyle practices to reduce pollution and help protect streams and lakes in our participating communities (Erie, Louisville, Longmont, Boulder, Boulder County, and Superior).

As part of a team, participants attend several meetings and complete an easy-to-follow program that ultimately creates a more livable neighborhood. With just a small time commitment, team members learn about their local water resources, review potential actions, and share their successes and ideas for the future. The program concludes with a celebratory activity.
